

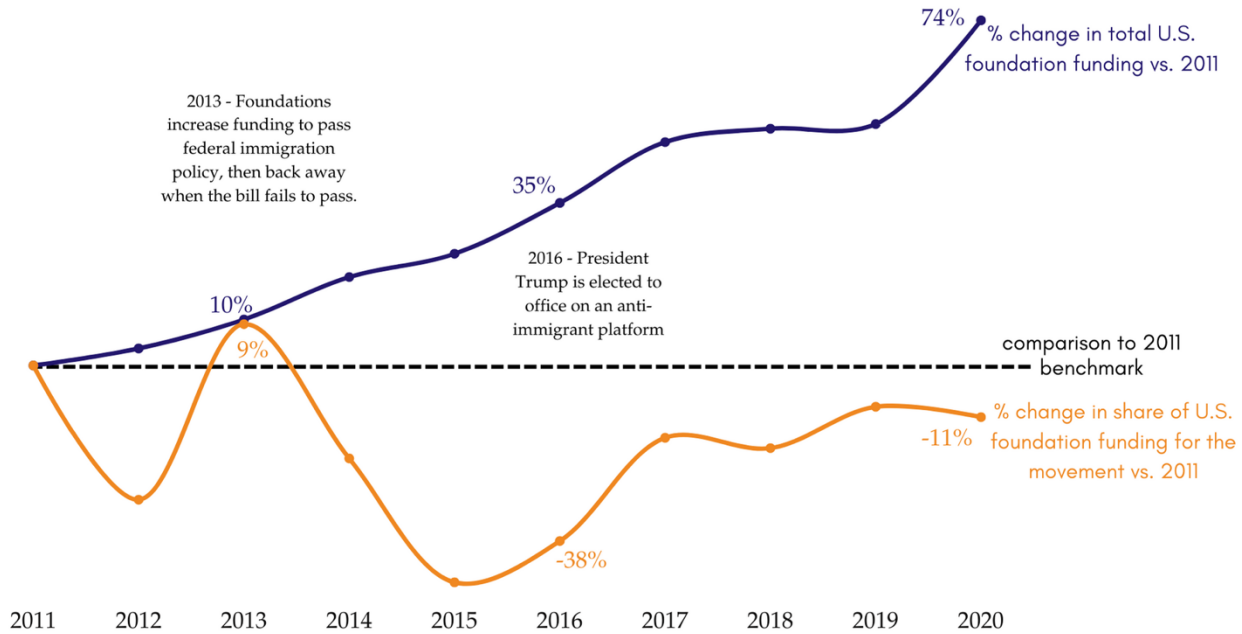

GRAPHICS

Foundations give 4x more now than 10 years ago - but the movement's share of that funding has shrunk.

All findings are based on NCRP analysis of Candid data; total US foundation funding figures are from Giving USA, which also sources its figures from Candid. The total foundation funding figures compiled by Giving USA do not include corporate foundations.

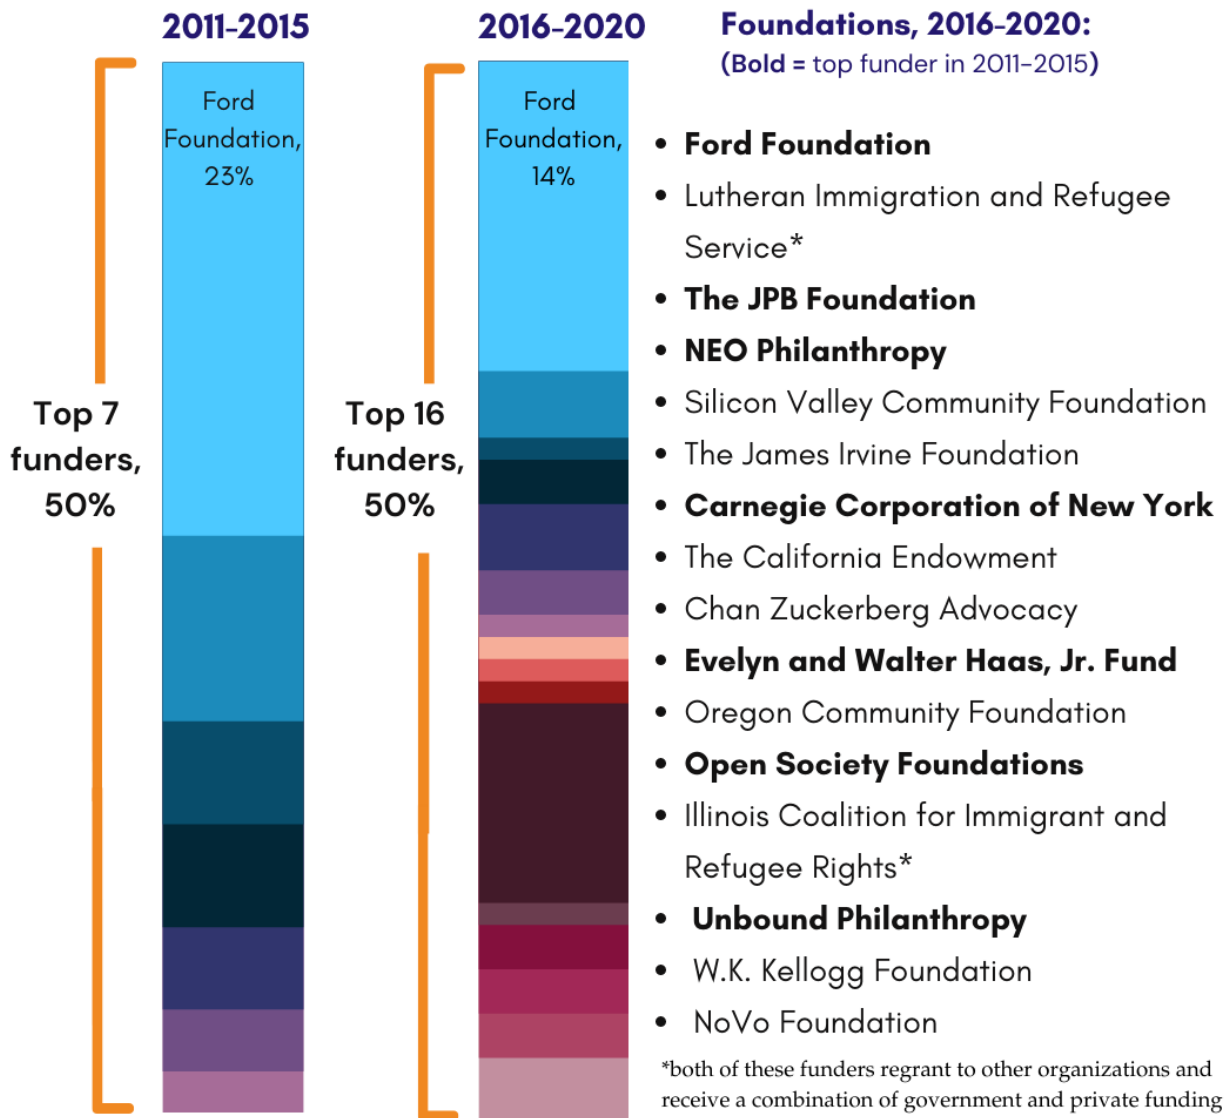

The South, Southwest and Mountain West are most underfunded. But no region has what it needs.

Source: NCRP analysis of Candid data

More funders supported the movement in recent years, but funding still relies on a small universe of funders

The number of funders that make up 50% of movement funding doubled in the last decade

Source: NCRP analysis of Candid data

UNDERFUNDED WITHIN THE MOVEMENT

For every $100 awarded by foundations, the movement only received $0.40.

UNDERFUNDED WITHIN THE MOVEMENT

Within an already underfunded movement, Black, AAPI, indigenous, refugee and LGBTQ migrant justice groups do groundbreaking work.

Yet these groups received just a drop in the bucket of total funding for the movement.

These communities overlap, and funding should also reflect the intersectional identities of these communities.

REFUGEE MIGRANT GROUPS

continue to rebuild and re-organize after the Trump administration's decimation of resettlement agencies.

Yet only received a drop in the bucket of funding from 2016-2020

15% of funding for the movement

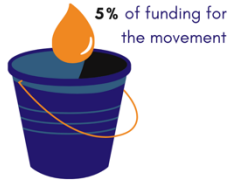

AAPI MIGRANT GROUPS

overcome persistent exclusion and push for wins that reflect dozens of communities' distinct needs and honor the diversity of the diaspora while combatting anti-Asian violence.

Photo from: NAKASEC (@nakasec)

Yet only received a drop in the bucket of funding from 2016-2020

National Committee for Responsive Philanthropy

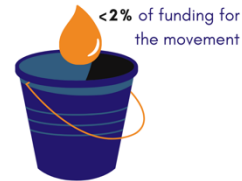

BLACK MIGRANT GROUPS

centering Black communities moving across borders — especially Black women and Black trans folks — honor every person who is caught in the crosshairs of our broken immigration and criminal justice systems.

Photo from: @LadoculBlackNetwork (@LadoculBlack)

Yet only received
 a drop in the bucket of funding
 from 2016-2020

National Committee for Responsive Philanthropy

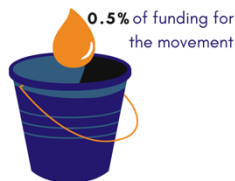

LGBTQ MIGRANT COMMUNITIES

deserve philanthropic allies ready to back up their words with action, especially as anti-immigrant and anti-trans attacks increase.

Photo from: QLTJ

Yet only received a drop in the bucket of funding
 from 2016-2020

National Committee for Responsive Philanthropy

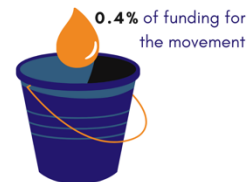

INDIGENOUS MIGRANT GROUPS

led by and centering Indigenous migrants support Indigenous communities who cross the border and may have deeper familial roots to the land than the people who live there today.

Photo from: CIELO

Yet only received a drop in the bucket of funding
 from 2016-2020

National Committee for Responsive Philanthropy